Costa Rica Photo Presentation

Visit Costa Rica through the lens of professional photographer, Judy Bingman
Thursday, January 19, 2012, 6-7pm

Judy has taken two trips to the Central American country of Costa Rica. Both trips were photography workshops with toucans and hummingbirds as the target species. However, in Costa Rica, while you are looking for toucans and hummingbirds, you will also see flowers, butterflies, iguanas, frogs, and lots of other birds. In addition to her wonderful photos Judy will share some of the special techniques for photographing hummingbirds she learned at these workshops.

Edible Ornaments for Birds and other Wildlife

During the winter, it is a challenge for birds and other wildlife to find sufficient food to survive because natural food sources are limited. During the holiday season you can decorate outdoor trees with natural ornaments for the birds and critters as a fun family project. Here are a few ideas that are easy for children, with adult supervision, to create:

Seed and Suet (or Peanut Butter) Pine Cones

- Collect as many pinecones as you want to hang on a bush or tree.
- For the hanger, fasten twine, ribbon, or wire to the pointy end of the pinecone.
- If using pure suet cakes, divide the cake into quarters and put a quarter at a time into a paper cup. Soften in the microwave for 20-second intervals and stir after each time. Try to avoid melting the suet because it is very hot and takes awhile to re-solidify.
- With a spoon or blunt knife work the peanut butter or softened suet into the openings on the pinecone.
- Put a few handfuls of Black Oil Sunflower, Birder's Choice, or Songbird Select seed mix into a plastic bag.
- Drop in the pinecones one at a time and shake or roll so that the seed sticks to the peanut butter or suet.

- Repeat until all the pinecones are complete and then go outside and hang them on your chosen tree or bush.

Whole Peanut and Cranberry Garland

- Tapestry needles, which take a large thread but have a dull point, work best for this and can be purchased at most craft centers.
- Cut 3-foot lengths of twine or string. Thread into eye of the needle.
- Make a loop for hanging onto the tree on one end and leave the other end plain.
- Take a whole peanut and poke the needle between the two kernels.
- If you want to put a gap between the peanuts, tie a knot in the twine before threading another peanut. Add cranberries as desired.
- When you come to the end of the string, tie another loop and hang.
- Make as many garlands as will fit on the tree.

Bread Cookie Cutter Ornaments

- Choose a fairly dense bread such as whole grain or pumpernickel.
- Choose holiday cookie cutters or our nature-themed Ann Clark cookie cutters.
- Spread peanut butter on one side of the bread then turn it over onto a plate of Birder's Choice Mix seed and press down.
- Cut shape with cookie cutter.
- Poke a hole in the top and tie string or ribbon. (Using a straw to make the hole works well.)

Seed Ornaments

- Caution: These do not stand up in rainy weather!
- Put Birder's Choice seed mix in a bowl and add one egg white per pound of seed. Stir to blend together.
- On a paper plate, pat seed into a mold or cookie cutter.
- Gently remove the mold or cookie cutter and put paper plate, with ornament, into the microwave for 1-2 minutes until firm.
- Let it cool.
- With glue gun, attach ribbon or twine for hanging.

Black Oil Sunflower Heads and Millet Sprays

- Dried sunflower heads are available at Los Gatos Birdwatcher in various sizes. They are very festive when tied with colorful ribbon and hung where they can be seen as they are devoured by the local birds and critters.
- Millet sprays come in bags of 5 sprays. Tie bright ribbons on each stem and tie to the tree.
- Chickadees and titmice love the sunflower and the "crowned" sparrows love the millet.

“Seven Ways to Help Birds” from my Songbirds Planner 2011

1. Keep cats indoors – Scientists estimate that free-roaming cats kill hundreds of millions of birds and other small animals each year. Cat predation is an added stress to wildlife populations already struggling to survive habitat loss, pollution, pesticides, and other human impacts. For more information visit the website (www.abcbirds.org/abcprograms/policy/cats/index.html)

2. Make your windows safer for birds – Current estimates are that windows kill as many a billion birds every year in the US alone. Songbirds migrating at night are killed at lighted windows in high rises, and at any time or day they may collide with windows of our homes. If birds strike a particular window, place at least two UV coated decals (WindowAlert) on the outside of the window to minimize future strikes.

3. Maintain feeders to provide the greatest benefit to birds with the least harm to them – Never allow seed to become moldy; rake the ground beneath feeders regularly; never set out bread, which attracts rodents, pigeons and invasive species. Close down your feeding station temporarily and clean your feeders if you notice any sign of sick birds.

4. Conserve water – Fresh water in lakes, rivers, and streams is growing scarcer and more polluted in many areas. Using rainwater for watering lawns, gardens, and houseplants, taking briefer showers, filling the bathtub less deeply and fixing dripping faucets all ensure that wild birds and we have clean water well into the future.

5. Participate in citizen science projects – The more information scientists have about bird populations, the more wisely we can conserve them. See “Citizen Science Projects” on the Cornell Lab of Ornithology’s website (www.feederwatch.org) and “Bird Counts” on the Santa Clara Valley Audubon Society’s website (www.scvas.org).

6. Buy a Duck Stamp – Revenue from the stamp available for anyone to purchase and required by all American waterfowl hunters provides critical habitat. A full $14.70 for every $15 stamp goes directly to acquiring habitat for national wildlife refuges. This benefits not just game species, but also a wide variety of nesting birds, an provides islands of excellent habitat – something becoming harder and harder for birds to find as more and more natural habitat is developed or put into crop production.

7. Drink certified “Bird Friendly” coffee – Typical high-yield coffee plantations require heavy use of fertilizers and pesticides, and are monocultures comparable to cornfields; few birds live on them. (We have a small section of bird friendly coffee from Thanksgiving Coffee Company.)

The new 2012 Songbird Planner is now available along with a wide selection of many nature-themed calendars.

Two Friends to remember well

Last issue we announced in the Sage Advice column that our dearest Sage had died on September 14. She stopped eating on Saturday, was diagnosed with three types of cancer in three organs on Tuesday, and told us on Wednesday morning that it was time to go. It was with many tears and much heartache that we said good-bye to our loyal, loving, and oh so accommodating member of our family and store team. The vets and techs at Los Gatos Dog and Cat Hospital took such wonderful care of all of us and she had a peaceful final journey.

A week later we received a phone call at home from our friend and former employee, Jared Lockhart, who is now a nurse in Bakersfield. His dear Sun Conyer, Cherry, had passed away suddenly and very unexpectedly. Cherry was the store bird on Sundays for many years and had a huge following. Her playful antics such as taking a bath in a paper cup and walking down my arm to get to my palmful of safflower will always be in our hearts.

Please remember both of these wonderful creatures who made so many so happy.

Wet and Cold Season Feeding

Serving suet, seeds with shells, and adding baffles/rain guards will help keep the birds well fed during the cold and wet season and reduce the waste of seed due to mold. If you have tube feeders, only fill them half as full so they rotate through the seed quicker, and fill them twice as often and the birds will thank you. When you do refill the feeder, be sure to empty out the leftovers in the bottom. Moldy seed can cause problems if ingested and also clumps together preventing the free flow of the seed above. A product that can help keep the seed dry is called "Feeder Fresh." Put a little at both the top and bottom of the feeder and it will absorb excess moisture and is not harmful to the birds if eaten. Monitoring the seed is especially important if you use any of our "hulled" seed or mixes. Since the seed doesn't have a shell covering, it is very susceptible to absorbing moisture.

Another way to protect the seed from the rain is with a weather dome or squirrel baffle. Granted this only works when there isn't any wind with the rain, but the birds like the protection.

With mesh Nyjer/thistle feeders, shake the seed up and down in the feeder on a daily basis when it's raining. This moves the seed around and gets air into the feeder. Another tip for Nyjer/thistle feeders is to increase the number of feeders to spread the birds out. Our American and Lesser Goldfinches and Pine Siskins that flock onto the Nyjer/thistle feeders are quite numerous this time of year. Because of this flockiness, they are susceptible to diseases like salmonella. By spreading them out to several feeders you can reduce the spread of disease. Also, it is important to clean up any seed that accumulates under the feeder to prevent ground feeders from getting sick. We now carry a new product, "Seed & Hull Digester" – new from Care-Free Enzymes, that makes all the discarded seed and hulls disappear. Remember, we clean feeders (see Services.)

SCVAS Christmas Bird Counts for 2011

The Santa Clara Valley Audubon Society (SCVAS), in conjunction with the National Audubon Society, is conducting four local Christmas Bird Counts (CBC). CBC's have been taking place throughout the country since 1900. These bird counts add to the body of bird research and knowledge about birds across the country through time at a specific time during the year. "It's also that time of year when supposedly mature adults scramble around madly counting birds for fun and glory," according to Kirsten Holmquist, compiler of the San Jose Count. It truly is fun and exciting and only costs $5 to join. Details are on the SCVAS website (www.svas.org)

All experience levels are welcome and needed. Bird identification skills are great but other skills are important too, such as spotter and tallier. The habitats are varied within the counts so talk to the compilers and see where you would be most comfortable. You can choose to count birds for a few hours or the entire day.

Festival of Trees

The 2011 Festival of Trees at King's Court kicks off on Saturday, December 10th with entertainment and other festivities. Every year selected local schools and community organizations vie for cash prizes by decorating trees at the shopping center. All the organizations will be attending the festival kick-off and will be able to answer questions about their missions. The winners are determined by your votes. Until December 18th you can support these local organizations by voting for your favorite tree at the Los Gatos Birdwatcher and all the other retailers in the center. One vote per person, please. The Peoples' Choice awards will be announced on December 22nd.

Field Trips & Outings

Saturday Morning Local Bird Walks

Join us every Saturday morning for an enjoyable meander looking for birds. Call the store Friday nights after 7pm to find out where we are going the next morning. Except for our once a month all-day field trips, we go on a local bird walk from 8 to 10 am and return for bagels and shade grown coffee. Some of the nearby places we go to are Oka Ponds, Guadalupe Oak Grove Park, Belgatos Park, Almaden Lake Park, Shoreline and Charleston Slough.

No Charge.

Sunnyvale Audubon walks

First Wednesday of the month

Dec 7, Jan 4, Feb 1 - Noon to 1pm

Bring your binoculars (loaners are available) and meet Freddy at the Sunnyvale Pollution Control Plant where Borregas and Caribbean meet off of 237. After entering the plant turn left at the first stop sign and continue to the end of the parking area. We will see raptors, shorebirds, and lots of ducks.

Call soon for reservations. These trips fill up fast.

Panoche Valley

Saturday, January 28 8am – 6pm

Let's Go Birding with Lisa Myers to the Panoche Valley which is a winter hot spot so close to the bay area. This high desert habitat is a must for any birder. Located between Los Banos and the coastal communities south of Hollister, this area has been left almost untouched by developers allowing for great habitat in which to find birds we don't often get in the highly populated bay area. Wintering raptors, Mountain Plover, Mountain Bluebirds, resident Phainopeplas, owls and roadrunners are just some of the birds we'll be looking for.

Fee $25 + share of gas.

Salinas River National Wildlife Refuge

Saturday, February 11 8am – 6pm

Let's Go Birding with Lisa Myers to this refuge where the Salinas River enters the sea. At just 367 acres, the Salinas River National Wildlife Refuge includes coastal dunes, beaches, salt marshes, saline ponds, grasslands, and riparian habitats. It is an important location for migrating birds along the Pacific Flyway. Our time here will include a slow walk along the trail and sand dunes as we look for the different families of birds found in this diverse habitat. if time allows, we'll also stop at Watsonville's Harkins Slough.

Fee: $25 + share of gas
